

Introduction

Interviewer notes

Below is a list of things that you should ideally do immediately before the interview begins. You may also provide this material in a written format which can be given to the participant or their consultee before the interview. If the participant in the interview lacks the capacity to provide informed consent but you have consent from a consultee, maybe consider simplifying this introduction, but it is still vital that you check that the participant is happy to be interviewed by you.

1. Explain who you / your organisation are.
2. Explain the purpose of the interview.
3. Outline what will happen with any data collected, this includes
 - i. how it will be stored
 - ii. how long it will be kept for
 - iii. the level of anonymity
 - iv. who will have access to the data
 - v. what the data will be used for (i.e. reports, presentations, etc.).
4. Outline who should be contacted if the participant does not feel happy about the interview process or (if applicable) wishes to withdraw from the study.
5. If you are using audio recording equipment, please check the participant is happy to be recorded.
6. Explain how the interview process will work. For example:

“I would like to ask you some questions about your life here in the care home. I would like to know about your experience of living in this care home and how you feel about your quality of life here. I will do this by asking about different aspects of your life. There are no wrong or right answers. I am just interested in your views and experiences. If I ask you something that isn't clear just ask me to explain, and if I ask you a question that you would rather not answer that is fine, just tell me you'd rather not talk about that and we can move on to another topic. If you would like to either have a short break or stop the interview entirely at any point, again just let me know.”
7. Even if you have already obtained written / verbal consent, before commencing the interview check that the participant agrees to take part.

Interview

Domains

Interviewer note: You may change the order you ask about different domains in light of the participant's responses. The aim is to allow the participant to talk in their own words about their experiences and feelings. Below are prompts to guide your interview; some are very broad, whereas others are more specific. You do not have to use them verbatim; rather, they are a guide to the topics you might like to cover. It is often useful to get a sense of the help a participant gets in each domain, for example, are they able to dress themselves.

Accommodation cleanliness and comfort

What do you think about your room here?

Tell me about your room?

Did you get to bring any of your own furniture with you?

Have you been able to put photos and pictures up in your room?

Were you able to choose your room and the things in it?

Who cleans your room?

How often is it cleaned?

Tell me about the lounge/the dining room.

Are you able to close your bedroom door when you want to?

Ending the interview

Interviewer note: When you feel that you have covered all the domains, you can begin to finish to interview. We suggest that you ask the participant if there is anything they would like talk about with regard to living in a care home that you have not covered so far and also give them the opportunity to ask you any questions they might have. Please thank the participant and, if appropriate, remind them what will happen with the information they have given you.
